

WORK, RESEARCH AND INNOVATION FOR TOMORROW'S ENTREPRENEURS

Newsletter no. 1, January 2016

Launched in August 2015, the Erasmus+ project WRITE: Work, Research and Innovation for Tomorrow's Entrepreneurs aims at reducing the education dropout phenomenon by investing on more articulate and consistent training and trying to make learning more entertaining using the gamification method.

Training modules will be created according to both the needs of young people lacking competences that are key for job placement and the requirements of the labor market. At the same time, the project will promote entrepreneurship among young people and will support youth in undertaking an entrepreneurial path.

In the previous months, the project has been analyzing the school dropout and unemployment phenomena in the partners' countries, conducting a survey of youth aged 12-18. The results of this analysis will be presented in the next newsletter.

The partners are currently addressing employers in their respective countries so to understand the requirements of the labour market in terms of competences desired from young professionals.
